<sup>6</sup> You may have an Introduction to each Part, each placed immediately after the Part Divider. In that case, Part I Part Divider takes p. 1, followed by a blank page so that the Introduction begins on an odd-numbered page. If the Introduction for each part is quite short (less than one page), however, then place it on the Part Divider page under the Part Title (using Times New Roman, 10 pt.). If, however, you have a single introduction for the entire book, then place that Introduction prior to the first Part Divider. In volumes that have no Part Dividers, the Introduction takes p. 1.

<sup>7</sup> VIBS now uses only author-date system of references with Works Cited. It no longer accepts manuscripts with notes with limited exceptions, such as the HAPS series, which may publish previously published material, for example. If you wish to use the endnote system, you must have the permission of your approval editor to do so. Please note that even within the exceptions for endnote use, for not-previously-published material, discursive notes are prohibited without exception. Notes may only be used for stating citations, and you should convert to the author-date system. Templates for the endnote system are included for approved exceptions only.
